Dear friends of Saints Peter Paul and Philomena,

Today we hear the Gospel of the pharisee and the publican. The pharisee seems to say to himself, "I am just; all the others are sinners." The publican simply says, "Have mercy upon me a sinner." The prayer of the pharisee was not pleasing to God, but nonetheless we can learn from both of them in that we must have a sense of gratitude, but in a genuine way, for all the gifts that God has given us from his bounty. We could for instance make a habit of thanking him every morning before going down to breakfast! God is great, we are little. For this reason we must have a realistic view of ourselves – to be humble is to be truthful and not to kid ourselves. Like the publican, we are sinners, and God looks down on us with paternal kindness when we humbly ask for his mercy.

Abbé Scott Tanner
