Dear friends of Saints Peter and Paul and Philomena,

Quis ut Deus? – “Who is like unto God?” This is the essential question – which is more than a question – by which St Michael responds to Satan’s rebellious cry, Non serviam, “I will not serve!” The faithful archangel proclaims his dependence on his Creator, and this is the heart of humility. Both of these angels were superior to other spiritual creatures by their intelligence, but they used it in opposite ways. Lucifer does not want to admit that his perfection was graciously given by God as a genuine but limited image of the perfection of the Trinity. St Michael, however, humbly recognized that he was only an effect of this great Cause. Any sin we commit is another non serviam: it refuses humbly to acknowledge our subordinate relationship to God as our cause and our perfect and supernatural happiness. Our conversion starts with a complete opening to God’s influence in our life, and practically speaking it has its roots in our humble and loving faithfulness in our prayer life and to in our acts. May the Prince of the Heavenly Host be our protector on earth and our our model in humility!

God bless you, Canon Montjean
